Perspectives on the Legislature in the Government of Nigeria is a collection of critical essays written by scholars and observers of the workings and performance of the legislature as a leading institution of democratic governance in Africa's largest democracy, the Federal Republic of Nigeria. The legislative institutions in Nigeria and other parts of Africa have been subjected to vicissitudes attendant to the myriads of challenges of nation- building and development that engulfed many post-colonial states, keeping them permanently in limbo and often in abeyance, for which reason they had suffered scholarly neglect and obscurity. This collection of essays is part of the renewed attempt to redirect attention to the study of the legislature, a renewal occasioned by the global resurgence of democracy which has continued to blossom in various parts of Africa after decades of authoritarian rule. It is a multi-perspective work that beams search light on various parts of the traditions and developments, powers and functions, workings and processes, as well as the problems and challenges of an institution that would remain central to any assessment of democracy and democratic consolidation in Nigeria in particular and Africa as a whole.

Dr WO Egbewole was educated at the University of Ife (Obafemi Awolowo University) and the University of Ilorin, Nigeria, where he is currently a Senior Lecturer and Dean of the Faculty of Law. An eminently senior Lawyer and Notary Public, he was Chairman of the Ilorin Branch and a Member of the National Executive Committee of the Nigerian Bar Association (NBA). He has attended many national and international conferences, served as resource persons at training programmes for parliamentarians, and is a leading consultant on parliamentary practice and procedure, legal drafting, and law reform. He has published extensively in his areas of academic interests, notably Jurisprudence and Legal Theory, Constitutional Law, International Humanitarian Law, Peace/Conflict Studies and Legislative Drafting, and is Editor of Millenium Legislature of the Living Spring (2003).

With advanced degrees in both Political Science and Law, Dr Mojeed Olujinmi A. Alabi taught Political Science, Public Administration, International Law and Diplomacy, and Public Law in three Nigerian universities, and was Head of the Department of Political Science, University of Ilorin, before his appointment as Expert in Good Governance, Ethics and Professionalism in the Public Sector at the African Training and Research Centre in Administration for Development (CAFRAD). He is a legal practitioner, and has served at various times in the Nigerian public sector, including a 4-year tenure as presiding officer of a state legislature. Dr Alabi has attended conferences spanning the continents of Africa, Europe and Australasia, with journal articles and contributions to books. He is the author of The Supreme Court in the Nigeria Political System, and has served on the Editorial Boards of the Journal of Law and Conflict Resolution (JLCR), Journal of Alternative Perspectives in the Social Sciences (JAPSS), Ilorin Journal of Business and Social Sciences (JBSS), and Ife Social Sciences Review (ISSR).
